

HOW TO EDUCATE YOUR CHILD—GIVE THEM THE DICTIONARY HABIT

Winifred Sackville Stoner Teaching Her Class of Babes.

TOLD BY WINIFRED SACKVILLE
STONER

Exponent of Natural Education

In the hope that other mothers, seeking for aids in the education of their children, will find them as valuable as I have in guiding myself and my daughter, Winifred, I herewith present a list of publications which I have used as textbooks. I call them my Natural Education Bookshelf.

Peter Rabbit, Little Black Quibba and O'Shea Nursery Classics used to teach children how to read and spell by the typewriter.

The Book of Knowledge for general information and to show what things can do and what we can do with things; to do away with examinations and to amuse children as well as to interest them in all live topics.

The O'Shea Health Series, showing how children can take care of themselves and how mothers can guard their children. These are the most interesting health books that have ever been written.

The Hornbook Arithmetic; this is an ideal book to teach children initial principles of mathematics and relations of one number to another.

The New Standard Dictionary; get the dictionary habit! teach children to go to the dictionary and seek for information.

The Jatakas tales of India; stories to teach morals and not to offend any one.

Historical Mother Goose; in these jingles Father History is wedded to